AITP Region 3 Student Conference

SAN ANGELO – The Association of Information Technology Professionals (AITP) Region 3 Student Conference will be held October 23-25 at Angelo State University. AITP Region 3 currently has approximately 750 student chapter members from colleges and universities in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Texas. The conference is designed for students planning careers in information systems or related fields. Over 200 students and faculty from across the region are expected to attend the conference to test their technology skills, learn from leading experts in their fields, and meet prospective employers.

The conference is hosted by the Angelo State University and Howard College AITP Student Chapters and the Concho Valley AITP Professional Chapter. Conference sponsors include USAA, Angelo State University, Howard College, and the San Angelo Chamber of Commerce. A number of exhibitors are expected to attend including Microsoft, Verizon, and Cisco.

The conference is intended to supplement traditional IT education. Students will be exposed to top IT industry speakers covering the latest industry trends and issues through educational sessions. The conference also includes various student competitions, an exhibit area, and countless networking opportunities with other IT students and professionals.

For more information, visit www.cvaitp.org/conference or contact Dr. Nancy Woods Hernandez at 325-481-8300 ext. 306 or Dr. Steve Reames at 325-942-2383 ext. 233.
